Dear Mr Mtshotshisa,

RE: SUBMISSIONS ON THE CHILDREN'S AMENDMENT BILL, 2018

1. We refer to the abovementioned matter, specifically to the notice published by the Department of Social Development ("DSD") in the Government Gazette of 29 October 2018, calling for public comments in respect of the Children's Amendment Bill ("the Bill").
2. Cause for Justice ("CFJ") hereby thanks the DSD for the opportunity to provide these written submissions and to participate in the law-making process.

BACKGROUND TO CAUSE FOR JUSTICE

3. CFJ is a non-profit human rights and public interest organisation founded in 2013 to advance constitutional justice in South Africa, primarily through participation in the legislative process and governmental decision-making structures, litigation and through creating public awareness on matters of public importance.
4. We focus our submissions on matters affecting rights, values and interests protected and/or promoted in the Bill of Rights and related matters affecting the best interest of children and the public interest.

MANAGEMENT COMMITTEE: RYAN SMIT, GENERAL MANAGER, +27 (0)83 235 1511 | WYNAND VILJOEN, CHAIRPERSON, +27 (0)82 891 7682 | CRAIG SNYDERS, EX-OFFICIO EXECUTIVE MEMBER | DIETER VON FINTEL, EX-OFFICIO EXECUTIVE MEMBER

Cause for Justice is a registered public benefit organisation for South African income tax purposes and may issue section 18A receipts, which entitle donors to claim tax deductions in respect of donations made to Cause for Justice. PBO number: 930045148

5. All five of CFJ's core values give it a particular interest in the Bill, namely (1) the responsible exercise of freedom, (2) protection and promotion of human worth/value, (3) protection of the vulnerable in society (social justice), (4) ensuring accountable government action and (5) protecting the family against destructive outside (and inside) forces.
6. CFJ has over the past five years been involved in matters pertaining to the law (and law reform) on sexual exploitation, and the protection of children from exposure to potentially harmful and disturbing materials and premature exposure to adult experiences.
7. During the course of 2013, 2014 and up to March 2015, CFJ was one of three applicants in the "ICASA // StarSat (formerly TopTV)" judicial review case.<sup>1</sup> The matter was finally disposed of in CFJ and its co-applicants' favour at 'leave to appeal'-stage in the Supreme Court of Appeal in March 2015.
8. In addition, CFJ also made submissions to the Films and Publications Board later in 2015 as part of the public participation process on the Draft Online Content Regulation Policy and is a participant in the SALRC's Project 107 - Sexual Offences: Pornography and Children (still on-going). CFJ also made submissions on the FPB's<sup>2</sup> Classification Guidelines ("the Guidelines") review process during 2018.
9. Furthermore, CFJ has been a stakeholder and active participant in the Parliamentary process on the Films and Publications Amendment Bill, 2015 ("the FPAB"), which proposes (amongst other interventions) the legalising of online pornography in South Africa. The FPAB is now being considered by the National Council of Provinces (NCOP), where CFJ has consulted with the NCOP Select Committee on Communications and Public Enterprises during its deliberations process.
10. CFJ also submitted written comments to the DSD on the draft Children's Third Amendment Bill ("the draft Bill"), on 13 September 2018.<sup>3</sup>

STRUCTURE OF SUBMISSIONS

11. Our submissions are structured under the following four headings:

- A Section 6B New insertion proposed by the draft Bill
‘children and the media’
- B Clause 160 Amendment of section 305 of the Children’s Act, 2005 (“the Act”)
‘offences’
- C Clause 7 Insertion of section 12A in the Act
‘discipline of children’
- D Clause 154 Amendment of section 294
‘genetic origin of child’

A SECTION 6B – NEW INSERTION PROPOSED BY THE DRAFT BILL – ‘CHILDREN AND THE MEDIA’

INTRODUCTION

12. The draft Bill proposed the insertion of a new section 6B – ‘Children and the media’ – into the Act. It read as follows:

13. Children and the media

6B. (1) The media may not publish child pornography; identify children who have been victims of violence, abuse, exploitation, or who have been charged with or convicted of a crime, without the consent of their parent(s), caregivers, or guardians and the child as contemplated in 6A.

(2) The media, parents, and caregivers or guardians must protect children from exposure to potentially disturbing or harmful materials and from premature exposure to adult experiences.

14. For some reason, which has not been disclosed or explained by the DSD in its Memorandum on the Objects of the Bill, the DSD has removed the proposed section 6B from the Bill.

15. It is critically important – and we submit, an absolute necessity – to create a legislative obligation to protect children from exposure to potentially disturbing or harmful materials and from premature exposure to adult experiences, and to give content to such obligation in so far as it applies to the media, parents, caregivers, guardians and other accountable persons in relation to the well-being and best interest of children.

Reasons why section 6B should remain in the Bill

15.1 The harmful impact of exposure to sexual and violent content, especially pornography, on children is well-researched and documented by a wide range of academics, researchers, international experts and child protection organisations.<sup>4</sup> Harms include amongst others poor mental health, sexual compulsivity/addiction, proclivity towards sexism and objectification, sexual aggression and violence, child-on-child sexual abuse, and shaping sexual behaviours.<sup>5</sup>

16. The FPB's Discussion Document on the Review of the Classification Guidelines ("the Discussion Document"),<sup>6</sup> notes the concern in respect of children's exposure to violence and sexual conduct in media, broadcasting and online content.<sup>7</sup>

"Classifiable elements within media content such as violence, sexual content and horror remain a concern and due to children's extensive exposure to different media platforms, they are more likely to be exposed to violent and sexual content on the various platforms."<sup>8</sup>

17. CFJ delivered written submissions in response to the Discussion Document.<sup>9</sup> Scientific research which studies the impact of certain media content on children at various developmental stages, has proven that exposure to violent and sexual content, and especially the combination of both, carries a significant risk of harm to both children and adults.<sup>10</sup>

17.1 According to Dr J Coulsen,<sup>11</sup> a leading Australian parenting expert, sexual and violent content genuinely influences the behaviour and morality of children (and adults). Such content has a definite impact on the way people behave towards others. While a specific person may not necessarily become "violent" or "sexual" in all instances, their behaviour and their responses are definitely impacted by what they have seen: their empathy is reduced, their objectification of others is increased, and their morality erodes.

- 17.2 The American College of Paediatricians<sup>12</sup> have found that increased exposure to sexual content among adolescents is correlated with increased sexual activity and risky sexual behaviours by those adolescents.<sup>13</sup>
- 17.3 A number of research studies have found that increased exposure to violent and sexually violent content is not only associated with increased violent behaviour, but that aggressive behaviour early in childhood is a reliable predictor of violence and juvenile delinquency later in childhood and adolescence.<sup>14</sup>
18. The Constitution<sup>15</sup> emphatically proclaims that children's best interest is of paramount importance in all matters concerning children.<sup>16</sup> The Constitution itself would therefore be solidly in favour of the creation of a positive obligation on persons with a particularly significant impact on children, including the media, parents, caregivers, guardians and other accountable persons, to protect children from exposure to potentially disturbing or harmful materials – such as violence and explicit sexual content – and from premature exposure to adult experiences (e.g. explicit sexual content).
19. The action/decision to remove (or not reproduce) the proposed section 6B from the Bill, accordingly, is either a grave oversight or a grave mistake.

Proposal # 1: Re-insert new section 6B in order to protect children from exposure to potentially disturbing or harmful materials and from premature exposure to adult experiences

20. Re-insert new section 6B – an improved version of the section 6B proposed in the draft Bill – and ensure that the provision is enforceable. The proposed section 6B in the draft Bill suffered from vagueness in a number of respects which would have made it ineffective to enable compliance

According to researchers K Rodenhizer and K Edwards, sexual violence (including sexual violence during dating) are widespread problems among adolescents (and emerging adults) and a growing body of research shows that exposure to sexual content and content that contains sexual violence, are risk factors for these behaviours. and therefore unenforceable. We accordingly include hereinbelow comments and proposals to address the shortcomings of the original section 6B (which formed part of the draft Bill).

COMMENTS AND PROPOSALS MADE IN RESPECT OF SECTION 6B OF THE DRAFT BILL

ACCOUNTABLE PERSONS

(1) Media

Concern

21. Section 6B places certain obligations on the “media”. However, neither the Act nor the draft Bill defines “the media”. It is therefore unclear who exactly the media is. By extension, it is uncertain to whom these obligations apply and against whom they will be enforceable.
22. The lack of legal clarity caused by the absence of a definition or description for “media”, will limit the practical effectiveness of this section and will frustrate achieving its purposes. It will also open the door for abuse by members of the media who may want to avoid the obligations imposed by this section – in that an undefined term leaves it open to argument and interpretation as to whom it applies.
23. Furthermore, statutory provisions that are vague and unclear as to its application (whether unjustifiably restricted or overbroad) is unconstitutional and will be declared invalid if constitutionally challenged. It is undesirable and potentially costly to attempt to pass legislation containing obvious deficiencies that make it vulnerable to constitutional challenge.

Proposal # 2: Definition/description of ‘the media’

24. The aforementioned deficiency can be addressed by providing a suitable definition or description for “the media”.
25. Therefore, we propose the insertion of a definition for “the media” in section 1 that at least includes:
  - 25.1 Broadcasters who are subject to regulation by ICASA<sup>17</sup> and/or the BCCSA;<sup>18</sup>

- 25.2 Creators, producers, distributors and exhibitors of films, games and publications that are regulated by the FPA;<sup>19</sup>
- 25.3 Creators, producers, distributors and exhibitors of advertisements that fall under the jurisdiction of ASASA;<sup>20</sup> and
- 25.4 Members of the Press Council of South Africa.<sup>21</sup>

(2) Other Accountable persons

Concern

26. Section 6B(2) requires the “media, parents, and caregivers or guardians” to protect children from exposure to potentially disturbing or harmful materials and from premature exposure to adult experiences. We submit that in this instance, the list is unnecessarily limited. Therefore, we suggest that the list be extended to place this duty to protect children on other persons or entities that work directly with, or in the furtherance of the best interests of, children.

Proposal # 3: Inclusion of other accountable persons

27. In this regard, we refer to section 110 of the Act, which requires certain persons to report child abuse and child neglect. We propose that the duty to protect children from exposure to potentially disturbing or harmful materials and from premature exposure to adult experiences be extended to the persons referred to in section 110 of the Act, which already recognises that these persons have a higher duty of care in relation to children than other members of the general public.

POTENTIALLY DISTURBING AND HARMFUL MATERIALS

Concern

28. Section 6B(2) refers to “potentially disturbing and harmful materials”. The phrase is too vague and so open for interpretation that it will not be implementable/enforceable in practice. The necessary clarification, which will cause the phrase to pass the threshold of law and pass constitutional muster, can be provided by linking the phrase to an objective description/measuring stick.

Proposal # 4: Clarifying the meaning of ‘potentially disturbing and harmful materials’

29. In this regard, since the phrase concerns “materials”, we suggest that the FPA classification scheme, as found in the FPA<sup>22</sup> and the FPB Classification Guidelines (“the Guidelines”),<sup>23</sup> provides an appropriate and suitable objective standard.
30. The Guidelines are subject to review every four years. The review process entails comprehensive public consultation in order to ensure that the norms, values and standards reflected in the Guidelines are consistent with those of the South African public and in line with constitutional norms and values. Its content accordingly is established by way of a democratic and participatory process. The Guidelines gives meaning to what “potentially disturbing and harmful materials” mean by indicating the suitability/appropriateness of varying media content for children of different ages. The Guidelines assigns age classifications to different materials based on a wide range of relevant factors to determine what kind of materials are potentially disturbing and harmful to children at which ages.
31. We accordingly propose that the subsection be amended to include referencing to the FPA classification scheme and Guidelines for purposes of determining the meaning of “potentially disturbing and harmful materials”.

PREMATURE EXPOSURE TO ADULT EXPERIENCES

Comment

32. Section 6B(2) refers to “adult experiences”. There are numerous experiences and actions that are legally reserved for adults – such as voting, consuming alcohol, having a driver’s licence etc. – that are not harmful to children to the extent that children observe adults partaking in such experiences or actions.
33. In our opinion, it is clear that the “adult experiences” contemplated are those experiences that are sexual in nature (including displays of non-sexual nudity) or relate to what is traditionally commonly referred to as “vices” (such as substance abuse).
34. Again, the context of the subsection in our opinion makes it clear that what is contemplated is not the premature exposure to real life adult experiences, but rather exposure to media content that contains (depictions of) adult experiences.

Proposal # 5: Clarifying the meaning of ‘premature exposure to adult experiences’

35. With regard to “premature exposure”, the FPA classification scheme and Guidelines are again of great assistance, since it provides a measuring stick for the suitability/appropriateness of varying media content for children of different ages. The Guidelines assigns age classifications to different materials based on a wide range of relevant factors to determine at what age exposure to what kind of content would be premature.
36. We accordingly propose that the subsection be amended to include referencing to the FPA classification scheme and Guidelines for purposes of determining the meaning of “premature exposure to adult experiences”.

“MUST PROTECT”

Concern

37. Subsection 6B(2) requires that the media, parents, caregivers and guardians “must protect” children from exposure to potentially disturbing or harmful materials and from premature exposure to adult experiences. The phrase “must protect” is vague because there is no indication or guidance as to the manner in which these persons “must protect” children – i.e. the standard of actions or measures to be taken to comply with this obligation is not specified. Without an objectively measurable or specified standard for compliance, also considering that in the present circumstances there is no sanction attached to non-compliance with the obligations created by the subsection, the subsection will have very little value as it will be up to each of the identified persons/groups to determine subjectively whether they are complying with the law. Such legislative text falls short of the requirements in order to constitute law.

Proposal # 6: Giving meaning to ‘must protect’ in order to enable compliance and enforceability

38. It is accordingly imperative that a subsection that provides a standard for compliance, should be added to subsection 6B(2). The purpose would not be to stipulate all possible actions and measures that each of the specified persons may conceivably take, but to set a standard or bar for compliance with the legislative obligation.
39. Without such addition/insertion, section 6B(2) will not be sufficiently practically implementable and enforceable to pass constitutional muster.
40. The additional subsection may require that -
  - 40.1 Each person or entity on which a duty to protect children as contemplated in section 6B rests, are obliged to take such steps and implement such measures as are reasonable in its particular circumstances to fulfil its duty to protect children within the meaning of section 6B. The contemplated steps and measures will include, although it would not be limited to -

- 40.1.1 In respect of each of the abovementioned media regulatory authorities - they must, being guided by the classification scheme in the FPA and Guidelines, revise and include practical measures in their codes of conduct / good practice, to give effect to the obligation to protect children as contemplated in section 6B(2) read with the FPA classification scheme and Guidelines.
- 40.1.2 An express obligation should also be inserted that all persons who are required to protect children as contemplated in section 6B, must comply with all other applicable legal and ethical obligations and duties imposed on them with regards to the protection of children in terms of law and the rules governing relevant professions, practices, industries, services, products, goods, and media and other created or produced content.

B CLAUSE 160 – AMENDMENT OF SECTION 305 OF THE ACT – ‘OFFENCES’

Concern

41. We propose the insertion a new section 6B – an improved version of the section 6B proposed in the draft Bill – in the Act, for the purposes of imposing an obligation to protect children on the identified accountable persons. However, the Act must provide for the enforcement of these new obligations. If an enforcement mechanism is not provided for, non-compliance will not result in any consequences being meted out by the Act, for the offending/contravening party.
42. Without consequences (including a sanction), the enforceability of the legislative obligation will be significantly reduced. There will effectively be no duty to comply, as there would be no incentive for the accountable person(s) to take the steps necessary to give effect to the obligation.
43. Express acknowledgment of non-compliance, coupled with a proportional sanction for non-compliance with statutory obligations, often serves as effective incentive to bring about compliance with the law.
44. Section 305 of the Act provides the mechanism whereby the obligations created by the Act are enforced. This section lists the sections of the Act that, if not complied with, constitute a contravention of the Act. Should a new section 6B be inserted in the Act, section 305 must be amended to include the new section.

Proposal # 7: Section 305 to be amended to include the contravention of section 6B as an offence

45. We propose that section 305 be amended to include non-compliance with new section 6B as an offence. We specifically propose that section 6B is included in section 305(1)(c) of the Act.

C CLAUSE 7 – INSERTION OF SECTION 12A IN THE ACT – ‘DISCIPLINE OF CHILDREN’

46. We agree with, confirm and support the submissions and proposals made by Freedom of Religion SA in respect of clause 7 of the Bill.

D CLAUSE 154 – AMENDMENT OF SECTION 294 OF THE ACT – ‘GENETIC ORIGIN OF CHILD’

Comment

47. The Bill proposes to amend section 294 of the Act, by the insertion of subsection 294(2), in order to allow the High Court to, upon application and good cause shown, declare a surrogate motherhood agreement valid where the child whose conception is contemplated in the agreement, is not conceived by using the gametes of (any of) the commissioning parent(s).
48. We do not support the amendment and recommend that section 294 remains as it currently reads. In this regard, we refer to judgment of the Constitutional Court in AB v Minister of Social Development.<sup>24</sup> In that matter a woman, AB, who could not produce a gamete of her own, wanted to use the gametes of male and female person to conceive a child to be carried by another female person, the surrogate mother. She sought an order to have section 294 of the Act declared invalid. The majority of the Court held that section 294 of the Act is constitutionally valid and therefore declined to order that the section is unconstitutional.
49. The Court adopted a purposive approach to the interpretation of the section in order to determine whether it is constitutionally valid.<sup>25</sup> The Court considered whether section 294 is irrational in terms of section 9(1) of the Constitution; whether AB’s rights to equality, dignity, bodily integrity (reproductive autonomy and reproductive health care), and privacy was limited by section 294; and whether such limitation was justifiable in terms of section 36(1) of the Constitution.

Rationality

50. The Court held that rationality is an incident of the rule of law.<sup>26</sup> When a law differentiates, the differentiation must be rational and not capricious or arbitrary. The differentiation must serve a legitimate government purpose.<sup>27</sup> The Court found that differentiation in section 294 does serve a legitimate and therefore rational purpose: the public good of creating a bond between the child and the commissioning parent(s).<sup>28</sup> This bond is created for the purpose of serving the best interest of the child that will be born, by providing that child with a genetic link to his/her parent(s).<sup>29</sup>

Limitation of rights

Right to equality

51. In order to determine whether section 294 infringes the right to equality, a two-stage enquiry is required. Firstly, it has to be determined whether the section discriminates against a specific class of persons.<sup>30</sup> Secondly, it has to be determined whether the discrimination is unfair on the basis that it occurs on one of the listed grounds.<sup>31</sup> The Court found that the section does not discriminate against a specific class of persons (persons who are infertile), in fact it affords infertile persons with an opportunity, which they otherwise would not have had, to make use of surrogacy under certain conditions.<sup>32</sup>

Right to reproductive autonomy and right to reproductive health care

52. The Court found that the right to dignity<sup>33</sup> and reproductive autonomy as guaranteed in section 12(2)(a) of the Constitution is not limited by section 294 of the Act. The Court held that the right to freedom and security of the person is a negative protection in the sense that it pertains to what may not be done to a person's body and not what may be done to a person's body.<sup>34</sup>
53. The Court found that section 294 does not limit the right to reproductive health care in terms of section 27(1)(a) of the Constitution, either. This section does not give rise to a self-standing and independent positive right. It must be read together with section 27(2) of the Constitution from which it is clear this section imposes an obligation on the state to progressively realise rights in accordance with the availability of resources.<sup>35</sup>

Right to privacy

54. The Court found that section 294 of the Act does not limit the right to privacy,<sup>36</sup> as the right to privacy does not include an independent right to autonomy.<sup>37</sup>

Limitations analysis

55. Since the Court found that section 294 does not limit any constitutional rights, a determination as to the limitation of rights was unnecessary.<sup>38</sup>

Proposal # 8: Section 294 to remain unchanged as it is in line with the Constitution

56. In light of the above, it is clear that section 294 of the Act as it currently reads is in line with the Constitution, as confirmed by the Constitutional Court. There are no constitutionally justifiable grounds for the proposed amendment of section 294. Parents who are unable to use surrogacy to have children, have the option of adopting a child. We accordingly propose that section 294 of the Act not be amended, but remains as it currently reads.
57. In South Africa, a country with a large orphan population, there is a particularly big need for adoptive parents. The requirement of a genetic link between the child to be born and at least one commissioning parent (for legal surrogacy) accordingly has the incidental/concomitant effect of prioritising the lives of existing children in need of parental care and family life over people's personal desires for a child of their own making, but who is equally unrelated to themselves as any adopted child would be. In essence, a "commissioned" child with no genetic link to the commissioning parent(s) is also an adopted child, but by disallowing the creation of such children, the law ends up valuing the lives of existing vulnerable children in need of care over the personal desires of would-be-parents to create unrelated new/other children from scratch.

CONCLUSION

58. In summary:
- 58.1 We support the insertion of a new section 6B, subject to the clarification of certain terms contained in the section and the elaboration of the section as set out above;
